WOMAN'S CLUB MEETING

With members of the Garden Discussion Group as their guests, The Sippican Woman's Club will hold its October 14th meeting at 2 o'clock in the Marion Art Center.

This is a special occasion because Mrs. Richard Pratt of Chestnut Hill and Cohasset is to be the speaker, and will show her own superb color slides of Massachusetts' famous "Garden in the Woods".

Mrs. Pratt is an expert nature photographer, and with her wildflower slides, has helped to bring "Garden in the Woods" to the attention of countless New England nature lovers. She serves as a director of the New England Wildflower Preservation Society, which now owns "Garden in the Woods".

In addition to membership in both the Cohasset and Chestnut Hill Garden Clubs, Mrs. Pratt is also an active member of the Arnold Arboretum Visiting Committee.

Her photographic affiliations are with the Boston Camera Club and the Photographic Society of America. She enjoys a high rating as a successful exhibitor in International Salons.

Mrs. Howard R. Patterson, chairman of the Conservation Committee, will introduce the speaker.

OFFICES CLOSED ON HOLIDAY

All town offices will be closed on Wednesday, October 12th, Columbus Day.

BOARD OF REGIONAL BAND HAS MEETING

The Board of the Regional Symphonic Band now incorporated under the name of Tri-County Music Association, Inc. met at the home of the chairman, Mr. David Hagen. A nominating committee was appointed with Mrs. Robert Thackeray of Marion as chairman. This committee will report to the annual meeting. Final plans for the annual meeting were made. The Association will meet October 18th at 8 P.M. at the Rochester Regional High School cafeteria. Refreshments will be served following the business meeting.

The purpose of this meeting is (1) to hear the reports of the officers and take any action thereunto (2) to fix and determine the amount of annual dues (3) to elect officers as provided by the by-laws and (4) to transact any other business which may properly come before the meeting.

The Regional Symphonic band, under the capable direction of Mr. John R. Pandolfi, plans to present three concerts for this coming sea-

AUCTION TO BENEFIT CARRIAGE HOUSE FUND

The weathervane figure, life size, of Daniel Boone atop a garage at 6 North Street, Mattapoisett marks the scene of an auction which will take place there on October 15th, starting at 10 A.M., proceeds of which will benefit the Carriage House Fund of the Mattapoisett Historical Society.

Mrs. David Todd, the president, announces her committee as follows: Mrs. Marland Bryant and Mrs. Francis Rowland, co-chairmen; Mrs. Earl Masterson and Miss Lydia LeB. Walker.

Goods, other than clothing, in great variety are welcome and will be collected on October 8th and 12th, by calling Mrs. Todd, 758-2163, in advance, or they will be accepted at 6 North Street on the 8th, 9th or 12th. Nothing from the Historical Society itself will be supplied.

The auctioneer will be Mrs. Florence Cornell. If rained out the auction will be postponed one week to October 22nd at the same place.

Incidentally, of interest to old timers and new comers both is that the maker of the landmark weathervane was the Manuel Perry, no longer alive, but who worked for 25 years for the late Mr. Gilbert Hinsdale, uncle of Mrs. Todd. Perry's beautiful carvings of ship models and other products of his skill such as ship models are owned by collectors including museums, among them the Whaling Museum.

You may look at the weathervane, but not buy it on October 15th as it is not among items for sale at the auction, the location of which it marks.

ATTENDED CONFERENCE OF LEAGUE

Five members of the League of Women Voters of Marion, Mrs. Motley Sawyer, Mrs. William Macy, Mrs. Howard Bush, Mrs. Stephen Saunders and Mrs. Frank Dibble, attended the Fall conference of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts in Memorial Hall of Harvard University in Cambridge on September 14.

Mr. William J. D. Boyd of the National Municipal League addressed the members on "The State Legislature: Need for Strength".

The League seeks to strengthen our state legislature by supporting Questions 1, 2 and 4 of the referenda in the November election.

Question 1, the Governor-Lieutenant Governor amendment would require that the two officers represent the same political party. The two names of the candidates would appear on the ballot but would be grouped together.

Question 2, the amendment for a reorganization plan procedure for the executive department, provides that the Governor may from time to time prepare reorganization plans to be presented to the Legislature. If the General Court has not disapproved within 60 days, the plan shall become law.

Question 4, the proposed home rule amendment, will grant authority to cities and towns to adopt, repeal and amend city and town charters and to conduct local affairs in accordance with General Law without specific authorization by the legislature. Action upon general elections, taxation, pledges of credit, disposition of park land, punishment for felony, or imposition of imprisonment is reserved to the legislature.

In the Afternoon Mr. William G. Saltonsall spoke about the State Board of Education of which he is chairman.

LITERATURE-DRAMA MEETING

The Literature-Drama Group of the Mattapoisett Woman's Club will meet Tuesday, October 11th, at the home of the chairman, Mrs. John R. Moynihan, Hollywoods, at 9:30 A.M.

This year the group will divide into two parts, a drama group and literature-reading group. The drama group plans to present a play at the Christmas meeting of the club, and also again at the Show and Tell meeting in March.

Those planning to attend next Tuesday's meeting are asked to notify the chairman.

and Hammond Streets where it has housed innumerable families in the intervening years. Father's main job was driving the delivery wagon--driving up and down the village streets taking orders from the housewives, returning to the store and putting up the orders to be delivered the next day.

Father had to walk back and forth to work from his Grandfather Hammond's on the Neck; and since he had to get to work at seven, he continued his habit of getting up at five. He shortened his twice daily trips considerably by walking the railroad tracks, turning off the Neck Road onto them just above his grandmother's house. After a short distance through the woods, he came to the causeway and crossed the marsh and iron bridge over the mouth of the river, and so along the whole length of Goodspeed's Island until he walked the embankment along the Eel Pond and so to Depot Street.

Occasionally he stayed in town in the evening for a dance or a party, and then faced the long trek late at night. On one such occasion he found himself caught in a lashing April rainstorm. The southwest gale drove the rain hard into his face, so he plowed along, head down, his umbrella half in front of him to bear the drive of the storm. He had no trouble keeping to his path, even though the night was inky black, because he simply kept between the tracks.

Somewhere halfway along Goodspeed's Island, kerwham! He hit something, and something hit him, that knocked him flat into the puddles between the ties. He lay there in the rain, getting his breath back, when a voice asked him if he was all right. A man had been coming from the opposite direction, also hunched under his umbrella, and they had collided head-on. Neither could see the other, or anything else, and after finding that the other was unhurt, each proceeded on his way--and neither ever knew who the other was. When I used to ask Father why he didn't ask the other who he was, his reply was a tart, "If you had been standing soaked through and shivering with cold in a drenching rain, you wouldn't have stopped to talk."

Each morning when Father got to work, his first job was to go to Mr. Caswell's barn to the west of the railroad on the continuation of Depot Street, where he fed and watered the three or four horses and hitched them to the delivery wagon. Then he drove his wagon to the store, loaded up his orders, and started out. This particular barn saw the death knell of one of Father's cherished ambitions. All through his boyhood he had longed above all things to learn to play the B-flat cornet, but of course as a poor farm boy he had no chance to get one. Now, however, after saving part of his pay for a while, he made a down payment on a second hand cornet. He arranged with the previous owner to give him a few informal lessons and then looked about for a place to practice. He asked Mr. Caswell if he could use the barn during his lunch hour, and received permission.

For a couple of weeks he enjoyed the bliss of fulfilling his boyhood dreams. But then his bliss was shattered. The elderly lady who lived in the Solomon Eaton House across the corner from the barn walked to the store and told Mr. Caswell she always took her nap right after lunch, and that Father's early attempts on his B-flat cornet did not help her slumber. Since she was a good customer of the store, Mr. Caswell reluctantly told Father he must stop practising in the barn. Father sold back the cornet, his musical career permanently blighted.

Working in the store, Father came in contact with a type of men he had not known before--the old whaling captains who came in daily and sat around the pot-bellied stove for hours, whiling the time away by telling tall tales of their whaling voyages. If Father, like hundreds of others, with the same opportunity, had spent half an hour each evening writing down some of these stories, he could later have made a small fortune. But people never do. Of course a great proportion of the yarns were fantastic fabrications, like Captain Theodore Morse's tale of spending the night on the back of a whale in mid-Pacific, thinking it was an island. Father would watch an old salt spit, with expert accuracy, a stream of tobacco juice through a small opening in the broken isinglass in the stove door, wink on the sly at his neighbor, and launch on a fabulous tale with a hilarious ending.

One of these captains was Captain Charles Barstow, who lived next door with his wife and daughter (who later became Mrs. Jennie Nottingham). It was Captain Charles who made the famous remark that children ought to be kept in a barrel and fed through the bung-hole. He notoriously was usually irked with his wife and daughter, and was always grumbling about them to the group around the stove. Father remembered one winter morning Captain Barstow burst in the front door, the skirts of his long thick overcoat sweeping the floor, and announcing in a loud voice, "There'll be two women in this town who will be glad when I'm carried out of the house feet first."

One member of the group was John Parker who lived down a few houses on the west side of Main Street. He was dying of throat cancer, and the pain was agonizing. He used to burst into the store the minute it opened, buy a bottle of a popular patent pain-killer, take out the stopple, and drink the whole bottleful, draining it to the dregs. The first time Father saw him do this, he almost died. During his boyhood on the farm, whenever any of the children had a toothache, his mother would put one drop or at most two, on a piece of cotton to be wedged against the aching tooth, all the time seriously explaining that it was so powerful that any

ENROLLMENT AT ORRHS ALL TIME HIGH

An enrollment of 945 pupils at the Old Rochester Regional High School for the school year 1966-1967 is an all time high. The new record making enrollment figure represents an increase of 53 pupils over last year. This new record making figure also indicates that the enrollment capacity of the building which is 950 has been reached.

Projected future enrollments commencing with the school year 1967-1968 and continuing through the school year 1971-1972 clearly indicate that additional educational space at the Old Rochester Regional High School is needed. The projected enrollments for the periods indicated are as follows: 1967-68, 959; 1968-69, 1000; 1969-70, 1026; 1970-71, 1035; 1971-72, 1073.

DAILY BULLETINS AT ORRHS

The Daily Bulletin is issued daily at the Old Rochester Regional High School. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays the student notices are read aloud over the high school inter-com by a student from Mr. Taylor's speech class. On Tuesdays and Thursdays the student notices are read in each homeroom during the homeroom period. The student notices contain such information as dates for College Boards, procedures for changing courses, information pertaining to scholarships and changes in school regulations. The student notices are posted daily on the bulletin board outside the Guidance Office for the benefit of students late to school or absent or who fail, for any reason, to hear the notices read aloud.

VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA SALVAGE DRIVE

Started your fall cleaning yet? Or is it just that you cannot face it, knowing all the things you just never use that are cluttering your closets, your storage spaces?

Just think about it this way: on those shelves, in those cartons, on the closet bars and the shoe racks, are many many items which you will never use again. But they will bring a sense of security, of well-being, and even a touch of joy to "the poorest of the poor," those who have little rcourse to the things most of us enjoy.

What can you do about it? Call 994-2113. That is the number of the Volunteers of America. Its 70th annual fall salvage drive is under way. Since 1896, they have been serving the poor, selflessly, without regard to race, creed or color. When you call them, they will come at your convenience, and pick up whatever items you wish to donate: clothing, shoes, or even refrigerators and old radios. The Volun-
